Websites -

There are some excellent newspaper websites. Probably the most comprehensive are telegraph.co.uk (Daily Telegraph), theguardian.com (The Guardian) and independent.co.uk (The Independent). The BBC has an excellent politics section. ukpollingreport.co.uk is an excellent site that shows the most current opinion polls for the main political parties. Finally Politics.co.uk is a good new site on political issues.

Lectures –

Have a look at TED talks on Politics: <https://www.ted.com/topics/politics>

Newspapers -

It is very important that politics students are up to date with issues in British Politics and over the summer you should read a broadsheet newspaper at least once a week, either a paper copy or via the website. Keep cuttings or add to your favourite's articles and stories that you find politically interesting.

Twitter feed –

Follow the RC Politics twitter feed: @ChallonersPol

TV Programmes -

Essential: Question Time most Thursdays BBC1 at 10.35pm

Recommended: The Daily Politics (BBC2 and BBC Parliament); Sunday Politics (BBC1 and BBC Parliament); This Week (most Thursdays BBC1 after Question Time).

Activities –

Visit the Houses of Parliament: <http://www.parliament.uk/visiting/visiting-and-tours/>

Debate -

There is no better way of developing an interest in Politics than having an enquiring and questioning nature. Do debate topical issues with your friends and family but always make sure that you are willing to listen to the views of others as well.

At Sixth form I have run a highly successful debating club; this is a real opportunity for any Politics student to have their opinions heard. Over the Summer, you might like to think of topics to suggest for next year's debates.
